Someone, somewhere wants your rubbish.

You know, that old three piece suite, TV, hairdryer or whatever.

It may be in working order, it may not even be very old, but you're sick of it and want something new. That means a trip to the tip which could cost you to get rid of it. Not now, though. Thanks to a new web site you can dispose of those unwanted items - by giving them away.

It's free, it's easy and it's environmentally friendly. In 2004 the UK produced about 335 million tonnes of waste which meant that every hour we threw away enough rubbish to fill the Royal Albert Hall. That's despite re-cycling schemes for plastics, paper, tins and glass run by councils across the country. The rest went into the skips. But much of it was still of use.

And that's where www.rehomeyourstuff.co.uk comes in. Launched on December 22nd 2007, it is very simple to use. It allows site visitors to post unwanted items online for free, so that other people who might want them can have them. There's no joining fee and items are free to list and rehome. You just call up the site and the rest is easy.

www.rehomeyourstuff.co.uk Marketing Director Elly Russell said the site was started because of environmental concerns. "So many things that are of use to someone are simply dumped even though they may have years of life left in them. So why not give them away, and in doing so cut down the amount of rubbish taken to landfill sites?"

"We have become a wasteful society and just throw things away when something new comes out. But to someone those items may be of use. That's what we are all about, putting people in touch with each other to give unwanted items away"

www.rehomeyourstuff.co.uk has a powerful search engine to help find items in a local area, or nationally and visitors can browse by category to find cool new things.

All items listed are free so site users can browse the site for new things they want every day.
